

MULTI-LAYER CONDUCTIVE MEMORY DEVICE

Abstract

A multilayered conductive memory device capable of storing information individually or as part of an array of memory devices is provided. Boundary control issues at the interface between layers of the device due to the use of incompatible materials can be avoided by intentionally doping the conductive metal oxide layers that are comprised of substantially similar materials. Methods of manufacture are also provided herein.